Jewish Source Holocaust-Related Manuscript Collections in the United States

The principal goal of the Museum's Jewish Source Study Initiative (JSSI) is to encourage the scholarly use of archival and other research resources created by Jewish organizations, shadow organizations, communities and individuals in the period immediately preceding, during and following the Holocaust. Facilitating access to such materials will provide scholars with opportunities to study the Holocaust in the context of Jewish history and civilization, through the eyes of European Jewish communities that found themselves under Nazi onslaught, and with the perspective of Jewish communities and organizations worldwide that sought, sometimes successfully and sometimes not, to understand what was happening and mobilize and respond.

For decades many scholars believed that nearly all significant Jewish source documentation of the period was destroyed during the conflagration. While much was destroyed, surprisingly rich documentation also survived. Top this day, the majority of such material remains understudied.

In addition to the Museum's efforts to search for, survey and microfilm such materials wherever they can be found abroad, the Center for Advanced Holocaust Studies has initiated an effort to identify and disseminate information about Holocaust-related Jewish source manuscript and oral history collections in university, college and other institutional libraries and archives in the United States, including those in Jewish museums and Holocaust education and memorial centers.

This list contains the results of a preliminary survey conducted during the summer of 2003. The survey was carried out by Naomi Shulman, a recent graduate of Indiana University and currently in graduate school at the University of California, Berkeley, and a participant in the Center's Dorot Foundation Graduate Student Summer Research Assistantship Program.

The list draws heavily on information and leads in the National Union Catalogue of Manuscripts at the Library of Congress, the University of Florida's CLAS database of college and university web sites, the directory of U.S. Jewish organizations published in the American Jewish Year Book, and the Center's own expanding database of Holocaust-related programs and courses at North American colleges and universities. The list is still under development and far from exhaustive. It does not yet include, for example, the resources housed in the special collections, manuscript, and Judaica departments of major public libraries (with the exception of the New York Public Library); collections in major synagogue and Jewish community center archives; or collections held by historical societies.

The Center welcomes suggestions and the submission of information concerning additional Holocaust-related Jewish source materials (manuscript, archival, oral testimony, and Yizkor book collections) for inclusion in future versions of this index. Inquiries and information should be addressed to:

The Arizona Jewish Historical Society (http://aspin.asu.edu/azjhs/) is dedicated to the appreciation and awareness of the Arizona and Southwestern Jewish experience, and the preservation of a record of Jewish contributions to Arizona's political, economic, social and cultural development.

"Shema Arizona" adds a Jewish voice to Arizona's history. Sixty-three oral histories conducted by the Arizona Jewish Historical Society provide a valuable and unique resource for understanding how American Jews in the early 20th century pulled up roots, continued a tradition of migration, and became western Jews.

The oral history project "Shema Arizona" includes interviews with Holocaust survivors Albert Eckstein and Sara F. Lehman.

Special Collections includes manuscripts, rare books, maps, and selected sound and video recordings. The Urban Archives Center documents the history of Los Angeles County by collecting original research materials from voluntary associations and community leaders. Major subjects of holdings include Labor and Guild History, Politics, Minority and Ethnic Studies, Women's Studies and the history of the San Fernando Valley. An Index to Research Topics (see for instance "Holocaust Survivors") and detailed finding guides for each collection are available in the Archives and the University Library reference room.

The Special Collections Division holds an oral history series of videotaped interviews with "Child Survivors of the Jewish Holocaust" (see http://www.csun.edu/~spcoll/fdgds8a.html for an inventory.) The records of the Community Relations Committee of the Jewish Federation Council of Greater Los Angeles, (1933-1980), which was formed in 1933 to combat un-American, anti-Semitic, and pro-Nazi organizations and propaganda in the United States, also contain relevant material, as do the records of the Jewish Family Service of Los Angeles (1902-1979).

The Special Collections comprise more than 25,000 linear feet of unique, original documents that support research in a variety of different academic fields.

By collecting knowledge, generating ideas, and disseminating both, the Hoover Institution seeks to secure and safeguard peace, improve the human condition, and limit government intrusion into the lives of individuals.

The Department of Special Collections houses the 1931-1987 records of "Jewish Social Studies," with correspondence pertaining to the Conference on Jewish Relations and materials relating to the Jewish Cultural Reconstruction. It also holds the extensive personal papers of Salo W. Baron, as well as the transcript of an interview with Stanford librarian Charles Milford, who survived the Holocaust as the child of a "privileged mixed marriage" in Germany. The Hoover Institution contains archival material pertaining to the 20th-century history of a variety of countries, including material related to the Holocaust.

Most area materials are housed in the Charles E. Young Research Library, which concentrates on acquiring research-level materials in the humanities and social sciences. Publications in other disciplines are collected by specialized campus libraries; the Biomedical Library, the Science and Engineering Libraries, the Arts Library, the Music Library, the Law Library, the Management Library and the Maps and Government Information Library collect area materials in their particular subject fields. The College Library collects mainly English-language area materials in a broad range of subjects at the undergraduate level.

Presently numbering in excess of 170,000 volumes, the Theodore E. Cummings Collections consist of materials relating to Jewish history, religion, language, society, and culture from around the world. Current and retrospective materials in all languages are collected in print, microform, and electronic formats and include monographs, serial publications, reference works, dissertations, and conference proceedings. While the largest number of holdings is in Hebrew and Yiddish, the collection includes materials in all western languages.

The Theodore E. Cummings Collection of Judaica and Hebraica holds over 500 Eastern European yizkor books (see http://www.library.ucla.edu/libraries/url/colls/judaica/yizkor.htm for inventory.) The Music Library holds an Oral History Collection containing the recollections of Jewish refugees, especially composers/musicians, most notably the archival material of Ernst Toch and Eric Zeisl.

The Center was established as the Oral History Project in 1968 and began to expand in the late seventies in response to a growing professional interest in this research technique. It was designated a Center by the University's Board of Trustees in 1981 and continues to increase both the number of research projects coming under its umbrella and the services it provides.

The Center for Oral History houses the collection "Holocaust Survivors in the Connecticut Region," which contains 24 interviews (refer to above website for a list of names of interviewees). A collection entitled "Witnesses to Nuremburg: An Oral History of American Participation at the War Crimes Trial" may also contain relevant material.
The conference program "Holocaust Program 1992" includes interviews with Holocaust survivors Ruth H. Klemens and Simon Konover, while "Holocaust Program 1993" contains interviews with Henry Levy and Helen Kopman.

The Special Collections Department of Gelman Library acquires, preserves, interprets, and makes available materials and information in three particular areas: Washingtoniana (the history of the Washington, D.C. metropolitan area), the history of GW, and the University's research and curricular needs.

The Special Collections Division holds the personal papers of William R. Perl, a Jewish leader who spent his youth in Vienna and organized a group which smuggled thousands of Jews into Palestine in the 1930s, and who was active in the Washington branch of the Jewish Defense League. His papers include files concerning his rescue of 40,000 European Jews as well as records relating to the World War II war crimes trials at Dachau. The Legal Files (1974-79) document the US case against Perl because of his Jewish Defense League actions.

The Library of Congress is the nation's oldest federal cultural institution, and it serves as the research arm of Congress. It is also the largest library in the world, with more than 126 million items on approximately 530 miles of bookshelves. The collections include nearly 19 million books, 2.6 million recordings, 12 million photographs, 4.8 million maps, and 56 million manuscripts. The Library's mission is to make its resources available and useful to the Congress and the American people and to sustain and preserve a universal collection of knowledge and creativity for future generations.

The Manuscript Division (see http://lcweb.loc.gov/rr/mss/f-aids/mssfa.html for finding aids) holds the personal papers of Hannah Arendt, as well as the Sigmund Freud Collection, which includes the papers of Freud's brother and sister-in-law Alexander and Sophie S. Freud, his nephew Harry Freud (son of Alexander and Sophie), and his sister Rosa Freud Graf, who perished in Auschwitz. The papers of diplomat Henry Morgenthau include material on the American Jewish Relief Committee. The records of the National Council of Jewish Women and of this organization's Washington, D.C. office contain information on concerns such as European refugees.

The African and Middle Eastern Division, Hebraic Section, which has long been recognized as one of the world's foremost centers for the study of Hebrew and Yiddish materials, holds a collection of over 120 yizkor books.

The State Historical Society of Iowa has a dual mission of preservation and education:
As a trustee of Iowa's historical legacy, SHSI identifies, records, collects, preserves, manages, and provides access to Iowa's historical resources. As an advocate of understanding Iowa's past, SHSI educates Iowans of all ages, conducts and stimulates research, disseminates information, and encourages and supports historical preservation and education efforts of others throughout the state.

In accordance with the Fortunoff Video Archive, the Special Collections Division houses the records of the Des Moines Holocaust Survivors Project, including interviews with Des Moines Holocaust survivors and audiotaped speeches by Elie Wiesel, Ronald Reagan, and Benjamin Meed, as manuscript Ms 1999.10.

The Tulane Manuscripts Department is one of the world's larger archives of the American Southern Jewish experience, with a particular emphasis on preserving the contributions of Jewish institutions and individuals to the cultural development of New Orleans.

The Jewish Studies holdings include the holographic correspondence of Menachem Begin to Luba K. Gurdus, author of the book The Death Train, which deals with a Nazi concentration camp during World War II. Also relevant are the papers of Margarete Bieber, a German classicist, art historian, and author dismissed by the Nazi regime in 1933, who subsequently held professorships at Oxford, Barnard College, and Columbia University, and was awarded the highest honor of the American Archaeological Institute. Ruth Dreyfous' papers include her memoir about a European traveling, which comments on the changing political climate and particularly on Austrian Jewish refugees.

Dedicated to the history of physics and allied fields, the Niels Bohr Library is part of the Center for History of Physics of the American Institute of Physics (AIP), located in College Park, Maryland. As part of its international, cooperative strategy to preserve and make known the history of modern physics and allied sciences and their relations with society, the Center maintains the Library to provide reference services and save unique materials where other repositories would be less suitable.

The Niels Bohr Library contains the manuscripts of Jewish scientists, primarily physicists, who fled Nazi Germany and continued their studies, research, and teaching in the UK or the UK. These manuscripts include the papers of Albert Einstein, Paul Rudolph Zillsel, Maria Stein, Heinrich Gerhard Kuhn, Vivian Annabelle Johnson, Karl Ferdinand Herzfeld, and Paul Peter Ewald. The papers of Samuel A. Goudsmit, who was detailed to the War Department as Chief of Scientific Intelligence of the Alsos Mission which moved with the advancing Allied forces in Europe to investigate the German atomic bomb project, may also contain pertinent material.

The Bentley Historical Library was established to carry out two functions: to serve as the official archives of the University and to document the history of the state of Michigan and the activities of its people, organizations and voluntary associations.

The Bentley Historical Library holds the personal papers of William Haber, a University of Michigan economist who served with the National Refugee Service; the American Jewish Committee; as Advisor on Jewish Affairs to the Commander-in-chief U.S. Forces in Germany and Austria (1948-1949); from 1950 as President of the American ORT Federation; and as President of the World ORT Union's Central Board from 1955 to 1975. The personal papers of internationally known physical chemist Kasimir Fajans, who emigrated from Germany to the US, include material pertaining to his concern for Jewish scholars in Germany before and during World War II and correspondence with many prominent figures of the day. The personal papers of Alfred G. Meyer, a University of Michigan professor of Political Science, include autobiographical material detailing his family's flight from Nazi Germany. The Special Collections Library holds the Joseph T. and Marie F. Adler collection of Holocaust and Judaica materials, organized into six series (Holocaust, Judaica, Anti-Semitism, Geographic Areas, History and Culture, Personalities) and made up of a wide variety of formats. Finally, the Harlan Hatcher Graduate Library also houses a number of yizkor books.

Since 1914, the American Jewish Joint Distribution Committee, Inc. (JDC) has served as the overseas arm of the American Jewish community. Our mission is to serve the needs of Jews throughout the world, particularly where their lives as Jews are threatened or made more difficult. Sponsoring programs of relief, rescue and renewal and helping Israel address its most urgent social challenges, the JDC is committed to the idea that all Jews are responsible for one another.

The JDC Archives document the operations and activities of the organization since 1914 in both text and photographic images. The material available is utilized by students and researchers of Jewish history in the 20th century.

The Archives hold collections about administration, overseas administration, organization, and the various areas of work. They also contain country files for the USSR, Switzerland, Rumania, Lithuania, Germany, France, England, Czechoslovakia, China, and Austria.

Center for Jewish History

American Jewish Historical Society
http://www.ajhs.org/research/Archives.cfm
The AJHS houses approximately 1,000 archival collections. Of those accessible via their on-line finding aid, the records of the National Jewish Welfare Board and the American Jewish Congress are of interest. Also relevant are the personal papers of Lucy S. Dawidowicz, a Holocaust historian; Marion E. Kenworthy, founder of the Non-Sectarian Committee for German Refugee Children; and Raphael Lemkin, an international lawyer who initiated the use of the term "genocide" and succeeded in getting the United Nations to adopt the Genocide Convention in 1948.

The American Jewish Historical Society also houses the Hadassah Archives, which contain the papers of Denise T. Ezekiel, primarily relating to her activities as Hadassah representative in Washington, including correspondence and cables concerning transport of Polish Jewish refugee children from Teheran to Palestine, 1942-43. The records of the Jewish Agency for Israel, Youth Aliyah Department, contain material on the movement to bring Jewish youth to Palestine, including records of offices in Berlin (Arbeitsgemeinschaft für Kinder und Jugend Aliyah), 1935-40.

American Sephardi Federation

http://www.asfonline.org/portal/librarycatalogues.asp

The records of the Central Sephardic Jewish Community of America, n.d., 1935-2000, contain material concerning the Holocaust and World War II era. There are many papers from the 1940s and early 1950s that mention the plight of Sephardim abroad. A large amount of correspondence related to this subject is available in Series I: Assistance Services; material is located in all three subseries. More information can be found in folders of foreign correspondence in Series IV: Correspondence and in Series VI: General Subject Files. Series VI contains a list of survivors of the Holocaust in Europe, a list of the losses of the Jewish population in Greece after German persecution in 1943 and 1944, a photo album of the destroyed Jewish cemetery of Salonica, and a list of Spanish Jews arrested by the Nazis in 1944 in Greece.

Leo Baeck Institute

http://www.lbi.org/about.html

The Leo Baeck Institute, devoted to the study of the history and the culture of German-speaking Jewry, houses much relevant material, such as the Austrian Heritage Collection, a program whose specific goal is to document the history of Austrian-Jewish émigrés who fled to the USA during the Nazi years. A unique collection of nearly 1300 memoirs offers rare insights into the lives of German Jews from all walks of life from 1790 to the post-war era, and thus contains works pertinent to the Holocaust. Many of the library's volumes were salvaged from famous Jewish libraries that were confiscated and dispersed by the Nazis.

YIVO Institute for Jewish Research

http://www.yivoinstitute.org/archlib/archives.htm

YIVO houses an extensive and varied Holocaust Collection, including the records of the Hebrew Immigrant Aid Society; original documents from ghettos in Poland; collections related to Jews in France during World War II; eyewitness accounts of the Holocaust; records of Displaced Persons camps in Germany, Austria, and Italy; and the Bund Archives, a collection that especially concerns the General Jewish Labor Bund in Lithuania, Poland, and Russia and the Jewish Labor Bund in Poland, Latvia, Lithuania, and Rumania between the World Wars and in other countries following World War II, and that contains information about the annihilation and resistance of Jews during World War II. YIVO also houses relevant film material, including unique films such as footage of the Warsaw and Cracow ghettos, amateur films about Jewish refugees in Shanghai, and a Yiddish-language newsreel of a memorial ceremony for Holocaust victims in Poland in 1947. Finally, YIVO is home to over 600 yizkor books.

The Franklin D. Roosevelt Library is the first of the presidential libraries, which resulted from the President Roosevelt's decision that a separate facility was needed to house the vast quantity of historical papers, books, and memorabilia he had accumulated during a lifetime of public service and private collecting. In erecting his library, Roosevelt created an institution to preserve intact all his papers, including papers from all his political offices, New York state senator (1910-13), assistant secretary of the Navy (1913-19), governor of New York (1929-32), and President of the United States (1933-45) and his private collections of papers, books, and memorabilia on the history of the U.S. Navy and Dutchess County, New York.

The library holds the personal papers of Ira A. Hirschmann, who served as Special Representative of the War Refugee Board attached to the United States Embassy in Ankara, Turkey, 1943-44. The papers relate to Hirschmann's activities with the War Refugee Board, especially the evacuation of Jews through Turkey.

HIAS/Hebrew Immigrant Aid Society
HIAS is the oldest immigration and refugee resettlement agency in the US, dedicated to assisting persecuted and oppressed people worldwide and delivering them to a safe haven. Since the 1880s, the agency has rescued more than four and a half million people. As the immigration arm of the American Jewish community, it also advocates for fair and just policies affecting refugees and immigrants.

After the Holocaust, HIAS assisted thousands of Jews to leave a devastated Europe to find new homes and build new lives in freedom. Working in the displaced persons camps, HIAS helped survivors to locate family in the US, to secure visas and to travel to their new homelands. HIAS archives contain the arrival cards for those individuals and families that migrated to the US.

The Dorot Jewish Division is uniquely constituted as both a subject and a language division. While the collection offers commentary on all aspects of Jewish life, it also includes Hebrew and Yiddish-language texts on general subjects. About forty percent of the Division's holdings are in Hebrew characters and the remainder are in other languages, primarily English, German, Russian, and French. The Division is especially strong in bibliographies and reference works, Jewish Americana, history and social studies, Kabbalistic and Hasidic works, texts by Christian Hebraists, rabbinic responsa, Hebrew and Yiddish literature, and periodicals and newspapers.

The Dorot Jewish Division holds the records of the Emergency Committee in Aid of Displaced Foreign Scholars, which contains diverse material about the migration of European (often Jewish) scholars to America in the 1930s and 1940s. The papers of Saul K. Padover (Jewish?), an Austrian émigré who served as Assistant Secretary of the Interior and did intelligence work in Europe during World War II, also contain pertinent material. A transcript of German-born publisher Kurt Enoch's oral history "Encounter with the Holocaust" is available, as well as photocopies of the collected survivor testimonies of 170 Lithuanian Jews, compiled by survivor Leyb Koniuchowsky, as well as over 650 yizkor books (see http://www2.nypl.org/home/research/dorot/yizkorbooks_intro.cfm for inventory of collection alphabetized by town.)

The Tamiment Library and Robert F. Wagner Labor Archives at New York University form a unique, internationally-known center for scholarly research on Labor and the Left. The primary focus is the complex relationship between trade unionism and progressive politics and how this evolved over time.

The Robert Wagner Labor Archives hold the records and photographs of the Jewish Labor Committee, an umbrella group of Jewish trade unions and fraternal organizations founded in 1934 for the purpose of organizing opposition to Fascism and providing assistance to its victims, which aided refugees and provided post-war relief to Holocaust victims (see http://www.nyu.edu/library/bobst/collections/exhibits/tam/JLC/1intro.html.) Jacob Pat's personal papers reflect his experiences as a refugee who devoted himself to anti-Nazi activity and rescue work in the US and held several posts in American Jewish organizations.

Wisconsin Historical Society
http://www.wisconsinhistory.org/archives
The Society's Archives holds the Wisconsin Survivors of the Holocaust interviews collection (Mss 605, Box 1-4), part of the Wisconsin Jewish Archives. The collection comprises 164 professionally tape-recorded interviews with Holocaust survivors who eventually settled in Wisconsin. The collection also includes 136 photographs. The interviews by Society staff discuss the survivors' pre-war circumstances, war-time experiences, post-war resettlement, and subsequent events in their lives. These experiences include deportation to labor and concentration camps, hiding in Holland and Germany, slave labor in Russia, and escape to Shanghai. Discussion of their post-war experiences concerns years in displaced persons camps, internment on Cyprus, temporary residence in Sweden, England and Israel, and resettlement in the US. Also included are two interviews with US citizens who worked with displaced persons after the war.

Transcriptions or partial transcriptions of most of the interviews were later created by the Historical Society's Division of Public History and are included in the collection. A published guide to the collection is available in the Library and abstracts are available on microfiche.

This bibliography was originally compiled by the Miller Nichols Library Exhibition Committee and edited by Brenda Dingley for the 1993 exhibit From the Rise of Nazism to the Holocaust. The exhibit highlighted a selection of books, magazines, and other historical materials from the Suzanne Statland Collection in Holocaust Studies in the University of Missouri-Kansas City Libraries, and was shown in conjunction with a photographic display from the Midwest Center for Holocaust Education commemorating the 50th anniversary of the Warsaw Ghetto Uprising in 1943.
